This extensive national consultation will explore the role of arts and culture for regional Australians and consider how the arts intersect with areas such as health, education, environment, tourism, technology, Indigenous culture and economic development.

Who should attend?

- Artists, arts and cultural workers, staff and volunteers of arts and cultural organisations and representatives from the creative industries sector
- Community interest groups
- Government representatives and departmental staff – local, state, federal
- Representatives for other sectors – including education and training, tourism, health, environment, technology, economic development and the community services sector.

Bathurst has been selected as one of only two locations in NSW to host these important consultations. Arts OutWest urges you to attend and take this opportunity to add your voice.
